PASCAL IRON WORKS!

MORRIS, TASKER & CO.,

Works So. 5th and Tasker sts., Office 209 So. Third st., Philadelphia

Office and Warehouse, 15 Gold st., New York,

Manufacturers of LAP-WELDED OIL WELL TUBE & CASING, Wrought Iron Welded Tubes, in and Galvanized, from 1-8 inch to 8 inch inside diameter.

Lap-Welded Boiler Tubes, from 1½ to 10 inches, outside diameter; in lengths 20 feet and under, made of best American Charcoal Iron.

Screwing Machines, and a full assortment of GAS AND STEAM FITTERS' TOOLS AND MATERIALS, Cast and Malleable Iron Fittings, BRASS AND IRON BODY VALVES AND COCKS, of all sizes from 1-8 inch to 12 inch, Gas Works, Lamp Posts, &c.

Our Oil Well Tubes are tested before leaving our works, with a pressure of 1,200 lbs. to the square inch. Each length is stamped near the screw with our trade mark—the sockets are not.

TRADE A MARK.

BRANCH OFFICE FERTIG BLOCK, Titusville, Pa.

MANUFACTURERS OF LAP WELDED Tubing & Casing Both Plain and Galvanized, for Oil and Salt Wells, American Charcoal Iron Boiler Tubes. Lap Welded Tubing for Steam and Water.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF W. C. ALLISON'S PATENT JOINT Oil Well Tubing.

This Superior Tubing is furnished with heavy sockets, and is cut with a vanishing screw thread, corresponding exactly with the thread in the socket, so that when screwed up it has a bearing the whole length of the joint; and the absence of a deep thread on the tube at the end of the socket obviates the liability to break at that point from the vibration caused by the action of the pump.

Each length and socket is stamped with our trade mark, and is carefully tested before shipment with a hydraulic pressure of 1,200 pounds to the square inch.

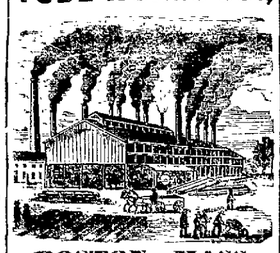
NATIONAL TUBE WORKS CO.,



BOSTON, MASS.

MANUFACTURERS OF LAP-WELDED OIL WELL Tubing & Casing.

We would call the particular attention of dealers and producers to this make of Tubing and Casing. One of the important features in the manufacture of our Tubing is, that the Lap and the Weld are made perfectly straight, smooth and uniform, thereby giving equal and great strength to the tubing throughout.

Each joint carefully inspected, reamed at end, and proved with the sockets on at a hydraulic pressure of 1,500 pounds to the square inch before shipment.

What Mr. Dana Really Thinks of General Grant.

From the Rochester Democrat.

Among the personal enemies of General Grant and his administration, few have been more conspicuous than Mr. Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun. A document has recently been brought to light, however, which shows that Mr. Dana has not always entertained the opinions which he now expresses in the Sun. It is a campaign life of General Grant, by Charles A. Dana, Esq., published in 1868. We quote a short extract:

"Early in 1860 he accepted a proposition from his father to remove to Galena and join his brothers in the leather business. Devoting himself with industry and good sense to his new occupation, he soon became familiar with all its branches, and achieved a fair degree of success. But, not being at all demonstrative in his manners, nor inclined to take an active part in the affairs of the town, he made but few acquaintances, and those mostly among the people with whom he had business. A few of the best citizens had broken through his natural reserve and discovered the sterling qualities of the man, though it is but fair to say that no one then suspected that the modest, quiet and obscure leather-dealer would ever become the most distinguished man of his time.

"When rebellion was precipitated upon the country by the attack on Fort Sumter, Grant had just attained his thirty-ninth year, and, having been blessed with a strong and elastic constitution, an equable temper, a stout and well-set figure, capable of great endurance, he had passed through the varied experience of his life with continually increasing powers. He had not reached the full mental development with manhood, but had increased steadily in mental and moral stature by the trials through which he had gone rather than by the years that had passed over his head.

"He had neither whims or hobbies, neither pet theories nor visionary schemes, but was entirely free from prejudice of every sort, and, better than all, he had reached that degree of common sense which, combined with truthfulness and steadfast courage, is superior to genius. Plain and simple in his address, with manners unspoiled by the world, direct in his purposes, slow to anger, sparing of words in public, free from guile and shams of every sort, and faithful in all things, he was regarded as a true friend, a good citizen and an honest man."

In his preface, Mr. Dana says he has collected for the people "all the information they naturally desire respecting this great soldier, sincere patriot, and naturally astute statesman." Concerning the political predictions of General Grant, Dana says that although he had voted for Buchanan, he had become convinced before the war that this, his first and only vote, has been a grevious mistake."

Temperance Progress.

Mr. Senator Wilson gave a temperance lecture in Boston, last Sunday evening, worth noticing, because he said that in Congress during the last seventeen years he had found that the members who used alcohol were invariably the first to be prostrated by protracted work. "In my experience," he said, "while Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, I always found that the men to be relied on were the men who drank not at all." However, Mr. Wilson thought that there were fewer drinking men in Congress now than when he first went to it. Formerly the night sessions were dreaded, on account of the debauchery to which they gave rise. Now, about one-quarter of the Senators are pledged temperance men, and there is not what may be called "a hard drinker" in the Senate at all. The facts are about the same in the House of Representatives. Once the departments were full of drunken men, now they are the exceptions. Coming from a source to be relied upon, these are interesting and cheering facts—Tribune.

From the Providence Journal.

The England of the olden times is no more, with its people of solid character and rigid honesty and quiet ways. There was a time when the aristocracy proved its right to exist by a nobility of life and a power of leadership. Now many elder sons of peers, by extravagancies in betting, and fast living, are ruining splendid estates, and undermining the nobility. Then, the middling classes, successful in business life, were noted for their dislike of ostentation. Their stores were oldfashioned; their houses modest; their style of living simple. Now, if all accounts are trustworthy, everything is changed. The tradesmen of London and Liverpool delight in extravagancies; they vie with each other in the splendor of palatial homes and furniture and equipages. Show is more highly esteemed than substance.

But the loss of simple habits is less to be lamented than the loss of honesty. The English love of fair dealing was once a proverb. Good measure, fidelity to contracts, pure articles, were proud distinctions coveted by the leaders in commerce and manufacture. But the greed for wealth, indulged by all classes, has sapped the old foundations of integrity, and trust even in long established houses is shaken. A true lover of his country, who mourns over this degeneracy, draws a sad picture of the decay of morals in trade. He says: "We Londoners are poisoned in the water which we drink, poisoned in the gas with which we light our houses; we are poisoned in our bread, poisoned in our milk and butter, poisoned in our beer, poisoned in the remedies for which, when these horrible compounds have produced their consequences, they, in their simplicity apply to our druggists; while the druggists are in turn cheated by the swindling rogues that supply their medicines."

Civic honesty is still maintained, we believe. Lobbyists do not bribe members of parliament, nor do rings gorge themselves with the spoils of city treasuries. But if the present tendencies continue unchecked, London may have its Tweed, and Liverpool its Sweeny.

American Absurdities in Dress.

How shocked would these ladies of our "first society" be if they knew that the torturing and ill-formed shoes on whose stilt-like heels they tilt and suffer no Paris shopkeeper would ever offer to a lady. To suffer the excruciating pain, to be crippled for life for the sake of playing the French lady, would be hard enough; but, after such martyrdom, to be like the demi-monde of the boulevards, is too bad.

For more than two years American women, especially young girls, have walked the public streets with conspicuous chains and lockets, or flaunting bows of ribbons, attracting the attention of every passing gazer to their bare throats and dresses open a cœur, solacing themselves for the exposition by the thought that it was "perfectly French." If so, it was a costume which no French lady would wear on the public pavement.

The dress of the French lady is artistic, simple, faultless—faultless often because it is simplicity itself. She may wear brilliant colors in her drawing-room, and in her carriage, never on the street. When she walks she wears black or gray, and it never drags on the ground. When she goes to church she wears the same colors, and is always attired in the simplest manner. This is true also of Italy. In the Sistine chapel, Rome, no lady can enter unless attired in black, with no covering on her head but a veil of the same hue.

What a contrast to the church attire of American women! They are accustomed to think themselves perfect saints compared with Italian and French women, yet they enter the house of God as they would a theatre. They don their gayest plumage, hang on all their chains and lockets, take off their kid gloves to show their diamond rings in the sacred temple, just as in the academy of music. Worse—they stare and comment on each other's costumes, and absolutely make the church of worship a place in which to study the fashions—this is not French.

The same lack of fitness in dress is seen in the utter disregard to age as well as occasion in the adaptations of dress. The woman of thirty or forty may be as beautiful as a woman of twenty, by her own right, if there is no incongruity between her years and her attire. It is only when the woman of forty dresses like the girl of twenty that she looks absurd. We despise her, not for what she is, but for trying to appear that which so palpably she is not.

A French married lady never wears a round hat; an English lady only in traveling; an English maiden never at church. Yet everywhere, American matrons with faces lined and scarred, may be seen with staring jockeys, set on their gray heads like helmets, beflowered and befeathered and more fantastic than the ones worn by their little daughters of ten; while the little girls of ten may be seen dancing at ball in brocade silks, and point lace collars old and grand enough for their grandmothers. Flannel and linen and muslin are worn by little princes and princesses abroad, but are by no means fine enough for the little princes and princesses American. All of which is not French, though to be "perfectly French" has been the alpha and omega of our alphabet in dress. Plainly we must begin to learn it over again.

Fire-Proof Buildings.

VIEWS OF THE SCULPTOR POWERS

The Providence Journal publishes a letter from Mr. Hiram Powers to a citizen of Rhode Island, in which, after alluding to the burning of Chicago, he says:

"But it may be asked, 'Is it possible to make a city fire-proof?' I answer, yes, and without any great expense. To prove this I have only to say that although there have been frequent fires in the city of Florence during the thirty-four years of my residence in it, not one house has been consumed, except a theatre, and that was not entirely destroyed. Rooms full of goods have been heated like ovens by ignited calicoes, straw hats, etc., but as the floors above and below were all covered with thin brick tiles, the goods burned without ventilation. And as there was no flame, a smoll like that of a coal-pit soon gave the alarm, and the fire was soon extinguished by no other engine than a squirt holding about a gallon, which discharged a well directed stream through some operatunte. I once beheld some firemen marching to a fire in Florence. Foremost were three men with picks, next four men with buckets, then three men with highly polished brass squirts on their shoulders; all marching with an air of pomp and importance. The fire was at the residence of Mr. Clevenger, the American sculptor, and had been burning twenty-four hours on the end of a joist just under the fire-place. He had smolt something like a coal-pit for some time, and at length perceived smoke rising from the brick floor. On going below he found the room full of smoke, and a rush-bottomed chair, just under the joist, was partially consumed. But the joist was not yet burned off, and why? Because the fire was bricked down. It could not rise and burst into flames.

"The secret of fire-proof building, then, is this: It must be impossible for the flames to pass through the floor or up the stairway. If you will have wooden floors and stairs, lay a flooring of the thinnest sheet iron over the joists, and your wood upon that, and sheath the stairs with the same material. A floor will not burn without a supply of air under it. Throw a dry board upon a perfectly flat pavement, and kindle it as it lies if you can. You may make a fire upon it, and in time consume it, but it will require a long time. Prevent drafts, and though there will still be fire, no house will be consumed. The combustion will go on so slowly that discovery is certain in time to prevent any great calamity. But the roofs, how about them? Slate or tiles Zinc melts too easily. I believe that hard burned tiles, if flat, would stand the frost at home; and if so they constitute the best roofing. My house has no joists. All the floors are of tiles resting on arches. One of those arches was made over a room twenty-five feet square, by four men in four days. The bricks are about one and a half-inch thick, and laid edgewise, with plaster of paris. There was no frame work prepared to lay them on, unless you would so term four bits of wood which a man could carry under his arm, and yet this arch is so strong as to be perfectly safe with a large dancing party on it. I never have have heard of one of those floors falling, and they are absolutely fire-proof. Of course light arches like these would not do for warehouses. It would pay, I think, to send out here for an Italian brick-mason who knows how to build these thin but strong arches for dwelling houses. I know that there is a prejudice at home against brick or composition floors. 'Too cold in winter,' it is said. And so they are, if bare, but cover them with several thicknesses of paper, and then carpet them, and no one can distinguish the slightest difference between their temperature and that of wood floors. Who doubts this let him try the experiment with the feet of the thermometer. The truth is that the brick or composition floor is no colder in itself than wood—the thermometer attests this—but it is a better conductor. I do not insure my house, as I know that it is not combustible.

"Yours truly, HIRAM POWERS

An Evening with Jenny Lind.

A RELIC OF THE PAST—MUSIC IN FLORENCE.

A correspondent of an eastern paper, writing from Florence, Italy, of date December 12th, says: Florence, notwithstanding gay Paris is once more accessible, is beginning to show a goodly number of winter visitors. The most notable at present is the once great cantatrice, Jenny Lind, who, with her family, has elected this fair city to pass the winter months. Of course all the Americans are on the qui vive to see and hear this famous songstress, and an opportunity was given last evening by the fair wife of the American Consul, Mr. L. L. Graham, at her elegant apartments, where a most delightful entertainment was given in honor of Madame Goldschmidt. Nearly one hundred persons were present, mostly Americans, some Italians and French. Jenny Lind, robed in a high-necked gray silk, trimmed with purple and India muslin cape and fall of lace over the back hair, which is still worn in the same style as when she charmed her audiences the public streets with conspicuous chains and lockets, or flaunting bows of ribbons, attracting the attention of every passing gazer to their bare throats and dresses open a cœur, solacing themselves for the exposition by the thought that it was "perfectly French." If so, it was a costume which no French lady would wear on the public pavement.

The dress of the French lady is artistic, simple, faultless—faultless often because it is simplicity itself. She may wear brilliant colors in her drawing-room, and in her carriage, never on the street. When she walks she wears black or gray, and it never drags on the ground. When she goes to church she wears the same colors, and is always attired in the simplest manner. This is true also of Italy. In the Sistine chapel, Rome, no lady can enter unless attired in black, with no covering on her head but a veil of the same hue.

What a contrast to the church attire of American women! They are accustomed to think themselves perfect saints compared with Italian and French women, yet they enter the house of God as they would a theatre. They don their gayest plumage, hang on all their chains and lockets, take off their kid gloves to show their diamond rings in the sacred temple, just as in the academy of music. Worse—they stare and comment on each other's costumes, and absolutely make the church of worship a place in which to study the fashions—this is not French.

The same lack of fitness in dress is seen in the utter disregard to age as well as occasion in the adaptations of dress. The woman of thirty or forty may be as beautiful as a woman of twenty, by her own right, if there is no incongruity between her years and her attire. It is only when the woman of forty dresses like the girl of twenty that she looks absurd. We despise her, not for what she is, but for trying to appear that which so palpably she is not.

A French married lady never wears a round hat; an English lady only in traveling; an English maiden never at church. Yet everywhere, American matrons with faces lined and scarred, may be seen with staring jockeys, set on their gray heads like helmets, beflowered and befeathered and more fantastic than the ones worn by their little daughters of ten; while the little girls of ten may be seen dancing at ball in brocade silks, and point lace collars old and grand enough for their grandmothers. Flannel and linen and muslin are worn by little princes and princesses abroad, but are by no means fine enough for the little princes and princesses American. All of which is not French, though to be "perfectly French" has been the alpha and omega of our alphabet in dress. Plainly we must begin to learn it over again.

Fire-Proof Buildings.

VIEWS OF THE SCULPTOR POWERS

The Providence Journal publishes a letter from Mr. Hiram Powers to a citizen of Rhode Island, in which, after alluding to the burning of Chicago, he says:

"But it may be asked, 'Is it possible to make a city fire-proof?' I answer, yes, and without any great expense. To prove this I have only to say that although there have been frequent fires in the city of Florence during the thirty-four years of my residence in it, not one house has been consumed, except a theatre, and that was not entirely destroyed. Rooms full of goods have been heated like ovens by ignited calicoes, straw hats, etc., but as the floors above and below were all covered with thin brick tiles, the goods burned without ventilation. And as there was no flame, a smoll like that of a coal-pit soon gave the alarm, and the fire was soon extinguished by no other engine than a squirt holding about a gallon, which discharged a well directed stream through some operatunte. I once beheld some firemen marching to a fire in Florence. Foremost were three men with picks, next four men with buckets, then three men with highly polished brass squirts on their shoulders; all marching with an air of pomp and importance. The fire was at the residence of Mr. Clevenger, the American sculptor, and had been burning twenty-four hours on the end of a joist just under the fire-place. He had smolt something like a coal-pit for some time, and at length perceived smoke rising from the brick floor. On going below he found the room full of smoke, and a rush-bottomed chair, just under the joist, was partially consumed. But the joist was not yet burned off, and why? Because the fire was bricked down. It could not rise and burst into flames.

"The secret of fire-proof building, then, is this: It must be impossible for the flames to pass through the floor or up the stairway. If you will have wooden floors and stairs, lay a flooring of the thinnest sheet iron over the joists, and your wood upon that, and sheath the stairs with the same material. A floor will not burn without a supply of air under it. Throw a dry board upon a perfectly flat pavement, and kindle it as it lies if you can. You may make a fire upon it, and in time consume it, but it will require a long time. Prevent drafts, and though there will still be fire, no house will be consumed. The combustion will go on so slowly that discovery is certain in time to prevent any great calamity. But the roofs, how about them? Slate or tiles Zinc melts too easily. I believe that hard burned tiles, if flat, would stand the frost at home; and if so they constitute the best roofing. My house has no joists. All the floors are of tiles resting on arches. One of those arches was made over a room twenty-five feet square, by four men in four days. The bricks are about one and a half-inch thick, and laid edgewise, with plaster of paris. Assassination of James Fisk Jr.

The intelligence that James Fisk, Jr, had been shot by Stokes in New York City, and that his wounds were likely to prove fatal, came over the wires Saturday evening, and created a profound sensation in this city. Yesterday morning, followed the intelligence that Fisk had died. For the circumstances of the assassination, and for the cause and sequel of this truly shocking tragedy, we refer the reader to our telegraphic dispatches We have heard but one opinion expressed of this terrible transaction, that it was alike cruel and dastardly, a most foul murder, and that the assassin may hang for his diabolical crime is the devout wish of all We were no admirer of the unfortunate man, and the cause of public and private morality demand that his life and death should be held up to the world as a warning to others

Mr. Fisk was a remarkable man and filled a large space in the financial world He possessed great wealth and wielded great power He was unscrupulous in his dealings, sacrificing everything to carry a point, and led a life of reckless and unblushing immorality This is a sad moment for writing his history or moralizing on his conduct He was not without kindly impulses, and generous instincts But his ruling passion seemed on inordinate vanity This he exhibited in foppery in dress, in showy equipage, and made him rather court caricature and attack as so many tributes to his importance, and as increasing the glare and dazzle of notoriety, in which he loved to live and move There was a magnetism in Fisk, which gave him a power of leading and misleading men His companions extol his good nature, his flow of spirit, his generosity, his fond of anecdote and lay emphasis on his freedom from many of the indulgences which in excess become vices He never drank nor smoked, alleging that wine confused, and the vapor of tobacco clouded his brain, which he wished to keep clear for business He was a man of great mental activity and great capacity and habit of labor He was unquestionably a voluptuary in his pleasures, and the slave of woman His attachment to Miss Mansfield awoke his better nature, and partook as much of sentiment as passion She, like women of her class, probably both loved and hated him, and could neither live with him nor without him. She probably was infatuated with Stokes, and Stokes with her, and it will be hard to persuade the world that this pair of blood-suckers, were not confederates in the death of Fisk Fisk was, however, near the end of his father Tammany, which was his right bower, was played out, and Erie was slipping from his grasp He had had the Empire State for the stage on which to play his antics, he played at battle-door and shuttle cock with railroad and steamboat lines Opera houses were his playthings, he shooted the military role, and equipped a regiment out of his private exchequer He made legislatures his tools, and purchased judges as Bonner does his horses, or Bennett his yachts But all such things must have a disgraceful and precipitate end, otherwise the very social system would fall to pieces Everybody said such a course of profligacy must end, but no one expected such a retribution as this The death of Fisk will be felt in Europe as sensibly as in New York, and other commercial centers, wherever American securities are held

The career of Fisk has done more damage to American finances and business character, in the eyes of European capitalists, than all other circumstances combined But the danger is that in the pity felt for his sudden death, while standing on the apex of splendid worldly power and fortune, the centre of a brilliant circle of satellites basking in the beams of his favor, that men should lose sight of the moral lesson which this startling termination and extinction of this meteor career was intended by a just Providence to convey to present and future generations

HOWARD OF ROCHESTER ORTS HIS DESERTS — Howard, who committed the outrage at Rochester, has recently got his deserts On Thursday night he was taken from the prison to court, in a secret manner, and had a night trial The court room was darkened, he plead guilty, was sentenced to twenty years at Auburn, muffled, and manacled, placed in a hack, conveyed to the depot, put on the train, and transported to the Auburn State's Prison, where he was safely and securely delivered over to the prison authorities, to expiate the sentence of the law

GREELEY has been before the Congressional Investigating Committee to tell what he knows about custom house frauds, and he does not know more than a last year's bird's nest His testimony is all hearsay, and all opinion Somebody told him that somebody said that somebody heard something A most lame and impotent conclusion

IN giving the record of the past year's events the New York Evening Post records the fact that in January, 1871, Horace Greeley nominated General Grant for a second Presidential term. Where was the 'one term principle' then? O, consistency thou art a jewel

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS — The Wharton switch could have prevented the recent accident on the Norristown road, caused by a "defective switch," in which two passenger cars were thrown off and burned up No one was crushed or burned to death in them, but that was another 'accident' Colonel Scott says of the Wharton switch on the Pennsylvania road "After careful experiment we think it adapted to all our wants, and have concluded to adopt it on our own road, and the roads leased by us" And engineer, S T Fuller, of the Baltimore road, says "We have more than one hundred in use to day, and we don't intend to have any other in our main tracks Every one speaks well of them enginemen, conductors, trainmen, roadmen and switchmen, it suits them all We have them at every point that can occur on a road We have them from the first made, with each subsequent improvement, to the present one and there is not a better, safer, cheaper switch, all things considered, than the 'Wharton switch'

For the year ending October 31 107 railway accidents are reported, killing 170 and seriously injuring 204 persons Of these accidents 40 were collisions of trains, killing 108 and injuring 211 persons The rest were caused by exploding locomotives, broken bridges, and defective rails or switches

The State Railroad Commissioner of Ohio advises the Legislature to limit the speed to 25 miles per hour, exclusive of stops But the traveling public will not value the life of one passenger in a million at so high a price Keeping boilers bridges, rails and switches up to the maximum of efficiency is the only alternative.

SHOOTING OF COL FISK

NEW YORK, Jan 7

Jas Fisk, Jr, was shot by Edward S Stokes, his opponent in the well known Fisk--Mansfield suit, at the Grand Central hotel, shortly after 4 o'clock p m this morning Definite particulars of the shooting have not yet been ascertained, but is understood that Fisk received three shots in the breast, and is believed to be dying His wife, who is in Boston, has been telegraphed for, to come to this city immediately Coroner Young has been notified to proceed to the hotel and take his ante-mortem deposition

LATER

The whole community was thrown into a state of intense excitement to day, by the intelligence that Colonel James Fisk, Jr had been shot and probably fatally wounded by Edward S Stokes It appears that at the close of the examination into the Fisk Mansfield case this afternoon, Stokes left the court room in a carriage and proceeded to the neighborhood of the Grand Opera-house in Twenty-third street, where he remained for some time Shortly after three o'clock Mr Fisk left the Erie office in the Opera-house building, entering a carriage Stokes did not follow him, but immediately drove to the Grand Central Hotel, which he was seen to enter about 3 30 Fisk's carriage arrived at ten minutes past four, and the Colonel alighted at the ladies entrance to pay a visit to Mrs Morse He was ascending the stairs leisurely, when he discovered Stokes standing at the head of the stairs with a pistol in his hand The door-keeper states that almost instantly two shots were fired, and that Fisk leaned up against the wall, saying, 'I am hurt' I am badly wounded Stokes waited some seconds at the head of the stairs, then turned, and walked coolly to the ladies' parlor, where he threw his revolver on a sofa, then quietly descended the stair case leading to the office The clerks and proprietors heard the report and were on the alert As Stokes passed the office he turned towards Mercur street, exclaiming, 'I guess there is somebody hurt in the house,' then broke into a run towards a barber shop The proprietor of the hotel shouted 'stop that man,' a ball boys and porters who started after Stokes, catching him just as he turned into the barber shop, and brought him back and detained him until the officers arrived, when he was taken to the Delmonico precinct station house, and locked up in the captain's room A number of guests and porters, meanwhile arrived at the scene of the tragedy, and Col Fisk was lifted up and carried to room 224, where he was laid on a sofa He was very cool and collected, and gave hasty instructions to send for a number of persons In a few minutes he was unconscious, and had at his bedside Dr Loster, Wood, Trypler, Taylor, Whitehouse and Marsh Several other physicians arrived later On examing the wounded man, the right arm was found shot through, and a wound was discovered three inches above the navel, and two inches to the right of the median line downward at an angle of 45 degrees The wound was probed, but the surgeons failed to discover the ball The chances were pronounced to be against his recovery, and his death from exhaustion declared probable The wounded man heard this decision calmly, immediately sent for David D Rudd, who, on his arrival, drew up Fisk's will, which was duly attested Callers now began pouring in, one of the first being William M Tweed, who remained with him till a late hour, J Gould, Peter B Sweeny, Miss Morse and her mother, whom he had come to visit, and several of Mr Fisk's family were the only persons admitted to the dying man's chamber, but messages were sent flying all over the city and in every direction A quarter of an hour after the occurrence the hotel was besieged by a multitude clamoring for intelligence and a large force of police were detailed to restore order and to prevent intruders from penetrating to the wounded man's chamber Nearly every politician of note in the city was in the vicinity of the building during the evening At 8 p m Superintendent Kelso, learning that Fisk's case was desperate, telegraphed to the twenty-eighth precinct station house for Coroner Young, who arrived and immediately proceeded to take the colonel's ante-mortem statement as follows

Jas Fisk, Jr, being sworn, says, "I feel I am in a very critical condition I hope I will recover This afternoon about half past four o'clock, I rode up to the Grand Central Hotel, entered by the ladies' entrance, and when I entered the first door I met a boy, of whom I inquired if Mrs Morse was in He told me Mrs Morse and her youngest daughter had gone out, but thought the other daughter was in her grandmother's room I asked him to go up and tell the daughter that I was there I came through the other door and was going up a stair, and had gone about two steps when, looking up, I saw Edward Stokes at the head of the stairs Soon as I saw him I noticed he had something in his hand, and it is a matter of some doubt in a report, and saw the flash, and felt the ball enter my abdomen on the right side The second shot was fired immediately after, which entered my left arm When I received the first shot I staggered and ran towards the door, but noticing a crowd gathering in front I ran back on the stairs again I was then brought up stairs in the hotel I saw nothing more of Stokes until he was brought before me by the officer for identification I fully identify Edward S Stokes as the person who shot me

Signed, JAMES FISK, JR

The jury found a verdict in accordance with the facts

An urgent telegram has been sent for Mrs Fisk at Boston, requesting her to come if necessary in a special train Mrs Hooker, Fisk's sister, to whom he is so deeply attached arrived at the hotel shortly after the occurrence and at once installed herself as nurse Her presence seemed greatly to relieve the wounded man Mrs Stokes, who is a very estimable lady, is said to be prostrated The Associated Press reporter interviewed Mr Stokes in his cell The prisoner was found lying on a hard couch In answer to the inquiry whether he wished to make any statement, answered "I am sorry that I have caused the laudable curiosity, but I have just had a consultation with my counsel, and it is his special request that I make no response to reporters or even to the coroner The witnesses detained by the coroner are Thomas Hart, guest of the hotel, the stage driver of the hotel, and doorkeeper, and one of the bell boys Mr Fisk was sleeping under the influence of morphine, with his pulse beating at 75 Dr Sayre, one of the physicians, is of the opinion that the wound will not prove fatal but his conferrers are of the opinion that the patient cannot possibly recover

The shooting was doubtless caused by the way things were going on in the courts The case at Yorkville this morning went against Stokes, and it was intimated that the grand jury would probably indict both Stokes and Miss Mansfield as black mailers

STILL LATER

The wound is of a terrible nature The pistol is a large sized revolver and the wound is like that of a ball from a Minnie rifle The doctors have little hopes of his recovery as it is expected that mortification will set in Colonel Fisk bore his injuries bravely, never flinching from the sharp probe of the surgeon in the vain attempt to find the bullet At one o'clock, this p m, Colonel Fisk was in a sound sleep, an anaesthetic having been administered to him About midnight a consultation of physicians was held and it was decided not to attempt to probe for a wound again for the present, for fear inflammation would set in The wound is healthy in appearance, and no blood is passed by evacuation At eight a m to morrow, an other consultation will be held Dr Carnochan, health officer of this port, states that the wound is very critical but there are hopes of his recovery, as all symptoms are favorable A crowd surrounded the station where Stokes is confined

Mr Fisk's statement to the coroner is to the effect that he had come to the hotel and made inquiries as to whether Miss Morse was in, and being answered in the affirmative proceeded up the stairs He had no suspicion that any one intended to harm him When about on the first landing he saw a flash and felt something strike him upon the abdomen Before falling he recognized Stokes as his assailant He did not again see Stokes till he was brought before him for identity The evidence of the boys in the hallway corroborated the statement of the wounded man The jury rendered a verdict that Fisk had come to his injuries at the hands of Edward S Stokes Baldin, his former partner, was among those who visited him

It is rumored that Stokes has engaged John Graham to act as his counsel

The bullet penetrated about two inches above the navel and passed down toward the right

DEATH OF COL JAMES FISK, JR

NEW YORK, Jan 7

A few minutes before eleven o'clock this morning James Fisk, Jr expired All that unremitting medical skill and attention could do had been done, but was of no avail Jay Gould was in attendance from an early hour this morning, His face wore a smile while there was yet hope that his friend would recover, but no sooner had Fisk expired than Gould's fortitude gave way and his grief found vent in tears The news of Fisk's death spread rapidly, and every where produced profound sensation and regret, and all aspersions that his enemies had heaped upon his character were in a moment forgotten, and only his noble qualities of head and heart were remembered, his frankness, his generosity, and his charity The scene around the room where the body lay was touching in the extreme, and it became necessary to admit upstairs only those who came at first on business notwithstanding a very large number of friends of Fisk and guests of the hotel reviewed the body, and many ladies were among them

Later in the afternoon, prior to the removal of the body to Fisk's late residence, the general public were admitted to view the body

At six o'clock this morning the first ominous change appeared in the patient, although not perhaps the first indication of the final end He grew a little restless, his face had a greater pallor, and his breathing was less easy and regular On feeling his pulse, Dr Fisher found it was more rapid, very nearly one hundred At half past ten, Colonel Fisk said something in a broken tone, and then closed his eyes The change in his face became more apparent The pallor was more death-like, and moisture appeared on his forehead The pulse was over one hundred, and the doctors stood by the bedside watching the patient attentively At seven o'clock it was first announced that he was fast sinking and that danger of a sudden ending of his intense agony was very great His pulse was at this time 140 Dr Fisher went down stairs in a hurried manner and asked something of the night clerk and then went back again He looked very anxious At half past 7 Mrs Fisk arrived She was admitted first into an ante room and soon afterwards into the bed room Mrs Fisk was terrible agitated at the bed side of her husband This scene was the most heartrending that had yet taken place, and those present could not suppress their emotion The doctors were appointed to by his wife to give some little hope, but they gently indicated that they dare not say there was any chance for life

Fisk was not much moved at the moment when he was cognizant of his surrounding but seemed never deserted by that coolness and fortitude which he displayed when first shot At eight o'clock there was a little change, and at 8 30 the doctors consulted, and at nine o'clock the suppressed excitement about his bed was almost too intense to bear At 9 30 his friends were permitted to go to his bedside and he thinked them for coming After this the rapidity of decline showed itself more strongly than before At ten o'clock there was eager and hushed whispering, as it was told in every one that the end was surely drawing nigh At 10 30 he lay scarcely knowing there were any ministering to him He turned his face to the wall, noticed no one, and ceased to breath at 11 15

COMMENTS UPON THE FISK MURDER

The Herald says The cowardliness of the act respeds its first fruits in the public mind by awakening for Fisk wide felt sympathy There is nothing in the case to distinguish it from murder for which death on the gallows is the penalty of the convicted

The Times pronounces the murderous deed brutal and cowardly, and will attract toward Fisk an amount of public sympathy to which no part of his career has entitled him

The body will be conveyed from his late residence, No 313 West Twenty-third street to the New Haven depot, at two o'clock Monday afternoon The funeral will take place at Brattleboro, Vermont, Tuesday at one o'clock p m

The brigade to which the Ninth Regiment is attached has been ordered out to escort the remains to the depot to-morrow, the ninth, acting as a special funeral escort The officers of the brigade will wear the usual badge of mourning thirty days

was taken to the Tombs this morning and placed in a cell on the second tier, where the worst criminals are confined When informed of Fisk's death he expressed regret and said he did the deed in a state of frenzy The indignation of the public finds vent in a general wish that the criminal may be tried, convicted and hanged without delay

The World says In the act may be seen in its most accurate type the spirit of those martial murders which disgrace our pretensions to civilization, and whatever measable results this wretched business may have, it will have one conceficnt result if it enables men who can not see that murder is murder, when perpetrated under the special plea of upholding the sanctity of marriage to appreciate some crime when perpetrated with a view of concealing ge

GRAND DUKE ALEXIS

The formal reception to the Grand Duke Alexis took place in the spacious parlors of the Southern Hotel, at one o'clock The rooms were crowded with ladies and gentlemen, who had assembled to witness the ceremonies and do honor to the representative of a powerful and friendly nation Upon the Duke being ushered into the parlor by the reception committee, Mayor Brown stepped forward and spoke as follows

YOUR IMPERIAL HIGHNESS Under monarchal forms of government it is customary for rank to be met by its equal on State occasions, but as in our system of government we have neither Kings, Princes, Czars, nor Emperors, nor other hereditary titles, we are unable to meet you on that standard of equality Yet while we have none of them, we are all sovereigns, and as such, welcome you to the city of St Louis Our government, as you are aware is Republican, and while we prefer that form to any other, it is not without its imperfections, for it is difficult to have liberty without licence—a freedom without abuse—and there is, perhaps, no more despotic power than that of majorities, but if we labor to some extent under these evils, we bear them patiently, as we know they are self disposed, and that our Government has within itself the remedy, for the minority of to-day becomes the ruling power of to morrow It make, then, but little difference what the form of Government is, provided it is wielded for the good of the governed And while that of America may differ from that of Russia, there was an era in the history of each when the liberty and happiness of millions were involved in a single act, and most nobly did your Royal father, by one stroke of the pen, vindicate the rights of humanity Alas, that ours was disposed of in blood I refer to the liberation of your serfs and our slaves, and with so noble an example set by two of the most powerful nations in the world, slavery must soon cease to exist. There has long existed great friendliness and cordiality between your government and ours, and we trust such will always be maintained, and we especially desire to express to your own recognition and sincere thanks for the kindnesses shown by your august father to some of our citizens while in your country, and appreciate them the more coming from so high a source Some of the gentlemen are now present and hope to have the opportunity of showing you in some slight manner, at least, their appreciation of this flattering attention from the Czar of all the Russias We are pleased to find that you were not satisfied with visiting merely the capital of our government, but that you have pierced to its centre and traversing its western border, and there have an opportunity of seeing our whole country and people Our city, we believe, is yet in its infancy, though containing probably 500 000 souls, and as time in try, I might say continent, lying west of us is as yet barely settled, it is fair to presume our city will grow, and if the last fifty years may be taken as a guide for the future, we shall have one of the largest cities on the continent We will feel great pleasure in showing you our public buildings and institutions, our iron and other manufactures, and the stupendous bridge across the Mississippi, now in course of construction, and ought else that will be likely to interest or please you On Monday evening we anticipate the pleasure of your company and that of your suite to an entertainment given in your honor, and where many of our people expect the pleasure of meeting you trusting that your stay with us may be pleasant and interesting, as we especially desire it shall be, and again, in the name of the people of St Louis, we welcome you to our city

His imperial highness responded as follows

GENTLEMEN I thank you for your cordial welcome I have come westward with particular pleasure, wishing to see as much as I can of the country from which the wealth of your great country will in the future be mainly derived, and I shall be happy to avail myself of your kind offer to visit your public buildings, your immense manufactories, and the remarkable bridge which will connect the east with the west now divided by the waters of the Mississippi

Quite a large number of prominent citizens were then formally introduced, after which the Duke and party retired to their apartments

THE CASE OF THE ALDERMEN

CHICAGO, Jan 6

In the criminal court this forenoon, a motion was made by the counsel for the defense to quash the indictments against a number of aldermen for offering to receive bribes Counsel for the aldermen moved to quash the indictments on the grounds that an alderman is not named in the statute in which the indictment is founded, he not being a ministerial or judicial officer, and the crime of soliciting a bribe by an alderman is not known to the statute The case was argued by Reynolds for the defense, and Sidney Smith for the people Judge Free took the case under advisement, and will render a decision on Monday

THE CUSTOM BLOCK

It is announced that an order has been received by District Attorney Grover from the authorities at Washington, instructing him to at once proceed to the condemnation of property in this city, known as the Custom Block, whereupon it is proposed to erect Government buildings It will be recollected that the government invited owners of this property to put in their proposals to sell This was done, but the figures were so exorbitant that they were at once rejected by the commissioners

WON I PAY THE RENT

CHICAGO, January 6

We are likely to have an anti rent war in this city Many of the tenants who have been permitted to occupy Lake Park at a stipulated rent by orders from the Board of Public Works, for the purpose of erecting thereon temporary warehouses, have declined to pay the two months rent due The reasons given for the refusal are various Some insist that the ground was dedicated exclusive ly to park purposes, and that the Board of Public Works had no right to give permits and that as a consequence the rent cannot be collected. Others insist that the rent is not due till the end of the year and that they will not pay till then Under these circumstances the Mayor will issue a proclamation notifying the authorities that unless they pay up at once the police will be instructed to at once remove them and their goods

A TERRIBLE MURDER

BALTIMORE, Jan 7

Dr Merryman Cole, a physician, aged seventy-three years was found brutally murdered in his dwelling on North Exeter street, about eight o'clock last night He was found lying on the office floor by his daughter, who went to call him to his supper, with thirteen wounds about his head and face, and with his skull crushed in three different places, apparently with a hammer One of the pockets of his pantaloons was torn out and a portion left hanging on the outside About nine dollars were found scattered about the floor, and $24 were found in in his wallet in his coat pocket On the table was an unfinished receipt, which Dr Cole was doubtless writing when struck down He was in the habit of collecting his rents every Saturday The locality of the murder was in the very heart of the city, being about two blocks west of Baltimore street, and east of John's Falls Intense excitement prevails, but no arrests have yet been made

From Washington.

AFFAIRS AT NEW ORLEANS

The War Department has no precise information of affairs at New Orleans, nor has it issued any orders to the General in command of that city Gen Emery in his response to a question of the Secretary of War says that United States troops had taken no part in the recent arrest of State officers

A RUMOR

There was an improbable story circulated to-day that one of our vessels had been fired into from the Moro Castle, Havana, but no information has been received up to one o'clock in regard to it.

A TRUE WORTH KNOWING — Many confectioners of our day use poisonous coloring matter in the composition of their candies, some of which, for instance, carmine, chrome yellow gamboge Prussian blue, and many others are injurious They also adulterate their candies with Terra Alba, Gluens and other substances, all of which are highly deleterious to the health. This is all done for the purpose of supplying the trade with a cheap article of candies These candies look as well to the eye as the genuine, and the retailer asks the highest price for them

It is for your interest not to allow your children to buy adulterated compounds Do not be any longer humbugged with vile stuff but come to our store and get a perfectly pure and reliable article manufactured by us, and for the purity and genuineness we can vouch Remember the fact, we keep nothing but pure goods

We are afraid not, to any great extent But she has plenty of doctors, and should lost no time in having her whole population vaccinated

WEEK OF PRAYER.—Union services of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian Churches of Titusville will commence in the Methodist Church this evening, at 7 30 o'clock Subject for the evening—Thanksgiving for God's "unmistakable gift" for mercies personal, relative and material for spiritual blessing for the progress of Christ's Kingdom, and for the usfulness of the Christian ministry Daily notice will be given to the public of the place of meeting each evening, and the subjects to be discussed

IMPORTANT HOSPITAL MEETING.—The Ladies' Home Relief Society desire to meet all parties interested in the hospital project at 7 o clock this evening, at the Session Room of the Presbyterian church, to perfect an organization by adopting a constitution, election of officers, etc A good hospital building has been secured, and money raised to carry it on The ladies wish it to be particularly understood that this meeting is not for raising money, but for the purposes above stated A full attendance is earnestly solicited

OIL FIRE AND FATAL ACCIDENT AT FOSTERS.—Saturday forenoon a train of six boiler tank oil cars standing on the side track at Foster station, on the Allegheny Valley Railroad, six miles below Franklin, took fire from the sparks of a passing locomotive The flames spread rapidly and burned a part of the trestle work at that point The heat was intense and no one could get very near the scene One of the tanks became heated to such an extent as to explode with terrific force, throwing the whole body of it a distance of two hundred yards, landing vertically across the track, and crushing instantly to death one of the engineers of the railroad He was struck across the breast and his head neck and shoulders ground literally into an inextinguishable mass

The morning mail train and the noon express from Pittsburgh were both detained, the former about six hours, for repairs to the track We shall give more complete particulars of this sad affair in our next issue Our informant gives the name of the engineer who was killed as Bennett

HOWE'S CIRCULATING LIBRARY.—The salubrious words of H C L, which have so haunted the imagination and bothered the wits of our people, was, after all, as simple as A B C Howe's Circulating Library is what it meant, and it was no joke It is a fixed fact, and if any want ocular demonstration of it let them step into Howe's new and elegant book store on Washington street Mr Howe has made a good start and has a goodly array of choice and popular books for loan to any responsible party The list comprises such standard novels as Dickens, Scott, Bulwer, Thackeray, Mrs Southworth, Charles Lever, Reade, Marion Harland, the histories of Hume, Gibbon, such poets as Byron and Schiller such works of travel as Bayard Taylor, etc We need not pursue the list to the end By this arrangement people can save their money, and indulge their literary taste at a small cost The library will number some fifteen hundred volumes, well selected and in all the different departments of literature A full line of new publications will be kept constantly on hand Yearly subscription $5 00, less time at proportionate rates

ACCIDENT.—A sad accident occurred on Saturday afternoon on Drake street, near Brook, by which Mrs Anna Seward, a music teacher, was seriously injured She was walking down the hill toward Spruce street, when she was overtaken by a large hand sleigh crowded with boys, and which struck her before she could get off the walk She was thrown violently to the ground, the fall causing a compound fracture of her right collar bone She was taken into the residence of Mr. H C Bardwell, where she received immediate medical attendance from D Varian

At the place where the accident occurred, on Drake street, there is quite a steep hill, which, even under ordinary circumstances, is dangerous to pedestrians in the winter But it has been made more dangerous by the boys, who have monopolized the sidewalk for coasting purposes They assemble there in large crowds, making the air resound with their cries of "clear the track," to all who may happen in their way We are not opposed to this boyish sport, for we were once a boy and did the same thing, but we deprecate the use of the sidewalks for that purpose Something should be done by the authorities to prohibit the boys from coasting on the sidewalks and places where it is dangerous to pedestrians Their lives and limbs are too precious to be endangered in this manner Everything has been tried by the residents of that locality to stop the boys, but to no purpose, and now it is the city's duty to interfere

DO NOT forget that R T Hazzard's closing out sale is still progressing

Destructive Conflagration in the Heart of the City.

ABOUT TWENTY BUILDINGS DESTROYED—COMMERCIAL BLOCK, PETROLEUM HALL, AND SHERMAN HOUSE IN ASHES—LOSS $75,000—INSURANCE $45,000—CITY SURVEYOR SMITH SEVERELY INJURED

The most destructive conflagration that has visited Titusville since the spring of 1866 when a portion of Franklin street was destroyed, occurred about midnight Sunday morning About twenty building were burned in the heart of the city, located on Spring and Franklin streets, extending from Arch street to the corner of Franklin and Spring, and on Spring to Holly's furniture store, opposite the HERALD building, making a clean sweep back to Arch street from Spring

The fire originated in the southwest corner of the shoe store of Fred Voss, opposite the Citizens Bank, on Spring street, and was discovered by Phil Hoenig, at fifteen minutes to one o'clock At this moment, the fire might have been extinguished, apparently, with a few buckets of water, but the moment the door was burst open, the whole interior was filled with flames The cry of fire was raised, but the alarm bell did not ring for a quarter of an hour afterwards The Colonel Drake engine was fired up in the engine house by Engineer Snyder, and promptly brought to the mill race Almost twenty minutes elapsed before the first stream was brought to bear upon the fire The other steamer, City of Titusville, took up a position at the same point, but was, owing to the absence of the engineer, John Pardee, who did not arrive for some time, slower in coming into action There was a fresh breeze blowing from the southwest, and the flames communicated to Clement's segar store and the Sherman House on the east, and to Kron's harness store on the west There were two streams brought to bear in front and two in the rear, but the fire by this time had got such headway that they had comparatively little effect About half the force of the fire department were out, and rendered very efficient service The ringing of the bell was not kept up, nor was it generally heard throught the city The steamers were well supplied with coal and wood, there was no lack of water or of hose, but a third steamer would have been a very important auxiliary in suppressing the fire The occupants of the buildings not in the immediate vicinity of the fire had the opportunity of removing their effects, the firemen and citizens generally actively participating Many officious persons did more harm than good, by breaking through doors and windows, admitting currents of air to fan the flames, and in a careless destruction of property Owing to the intense heat the Citizens' Bank and HERALD Block were for nearly two hours in imminent peril Carpets were, however, suspended from the roofs and kept saturated with water The windows in the Bank were smashed, and the window sills badly scorched Meanwhile the fire had spread to the main building of the Sherman House, where the utmost confusion and consternation prevailed among the numerous guests and domestics The flames spread rapidly southwest till they forced their way through to the middle of the block on Franklin street The front part of the Petroleum Hall, and subsequently of the Commercial Block, were so gallantly and desperately defended by the firemen that the flames took a southerly direction and the north wall was the last to fall a prey to the devouring element The flames spread through to Arch street and came out opposite the Ralph Bath building, very rapidly, as the wind was blowing in that direction A perfect shower of ignited embers alighted on the roof of this building, and eventually set it on fire A ladder was procured and placed against the roof Mr Joseph Smith, assistant city engineer, mounted with a bucket of water, and just as he had nearly reached the top, the ladder slipped on the ice, and he was precipitated to the ground a distance of about twenty feet He fell on his knees, fracturing both knee pans, and received a severe gash on the forehead, also other minor injuries He was taken to the bakery of Joseph Frank, on Franklin street, where his wounds were dressed by Drs Young and Varian He was then conveyed on a mattress to the residence of Mr A B Howland, on Brown street His physician, Dr Young, informs us that he was comfortable last evening

Two extra streams of water were soon afterwards brought to bear in this vicinity, one from the mill race and another from the Washington hand engine No 2, which effectually prevented the fire from crossing Arch street

A desperate combat with the flames took place at the Holly store, opposite the HERALD office, which was finally crowned with success, the flames being subdued and the building saved

In Howe's news room the books were packed up preparatory to a hasty exit The Postmaster had the entire mail matter and public property taken from the drawers and boxes of the post-office, locked up in mail bags, and conveyed to his residence In the HERALD office, the forms were locked up for removal, and preparations made for removing such property as was most essential for preservation Mr Abbott and others were busily engaged in making preparations to remove the books, papers and funds of the Citizens Bank, in case of extremity At three o'clock the whole area, bounded by Arch, Franklin and Spring streets, up to Holly's building was a sea of flame, beyond these limits it did not extend, and by five o'clock, all the walls had fallen or been torn down, and the whole scene was a smoking ruin The surrounding streets were blockaded with goods and furniture, and a train of wagons kept removing them to places of safety Although much confusion prevailed there was but little disorderly conduct, or drunkenness

The whole of the city police on night duty were on hand at the breaking out of the fire, and numerous specials came on the ground soon after Mayor Bates swore in a number of extra police to aid in the preservation of property, the squads being officered as follows H B Ostrom, George Abbey, B D Dutton, M Spiesman, M Goodwin There were only four arrests made for petty thieving and drunkenness A large amount of unclaimed property was conveyed to police headquarters yesterday to await identification The homeless were almost immediately provided with shelter at the houses of their friends, and there was consequently very little suffering from exposure, excepting in a few isolated cases

We have made out a list of the losses and of the insurances as nearly as could be ascertained

Jacob and Margaret Theobold, saloon and dwelling, loss on building and contents $3 000, insurance $2,800

Frank Natcher, liquor store, loss on building $1,000, no insurance.

Mrs Bartholomew's Hotel, loss on building, $4 000, loss on goods $750, insurance $1,000.

The burnt district was covered entirely with frame buildings, there was but a single brick wall on the entire block consumed, many of them were a story and a half structures, and in the ordinary march of progress must soon had been supplanted by more substantial buildings The dilapidated condition of the houses, together with the inflamable character of their contents, rendered them an easy prey to the flames There will be individual cases of loss from destruction of property, and interruption of business, but the insurance appears to be fully adequate to cover general losses The site is the most eligible in the city for business purposes, and will, probably, be rebuilt in a substantial manner. The city authorities will demand that no building except of brick, stone or iron, shall be erected hereafter upon this central location. This same locality was swept by a similar conflagration seven or eight years ago, and the year previous another fire had destroyed nearly all the buildings between Franklin and Martin streets, between Diamond and Pine Destructive and extensive as this fire was, and much as it is to be regretted, that so many have been thrown out of business temporarily, still it can not be looked upon as a general calamity, but as tending to a more secure, ornamental and substantial building up of our city

A GOOD THING DONE.—Mayor Bates, J H Broas, Mr Mitchel and some other property owners on Main street near Mr Harris' planing mill on Walnut street, hearing of the intention of Mr Harris of enlarging his mill, have paid him $1,000 to remove the mill and discontinue the business from the premises We are informed this has praised the value of property in its immediate neighborhood from $10 000 to $30 000, The gentlemen have done a good thing and should be remembered for the act

STREET SEWERS

To the Public and those it may concern

An article appeared in the Titusville MORNING HERALD, of the 30th ult, in relation to sewers The statement was so utterly false in every particular, and as this article might have a tendency to poison the public mind to my disadvantage, I deem it a duty I owe to my friends and self to ventilate a few facts in relation to my connection with the Titusville sewers, engineer, and other brilliant I ams of the aforesaid city I came to this city and brought with me means, ability energy, and experience, supported and recommended by some of the most honorable influential and wealthy men of the city of Erie, I made a contract in good faith with the authorized representatives of the city of Titusville The plans and specifications of the work went to show that the outlet of Pine street at Church Run was a cutting of 7 feet 2 inch The city engineer, after signing the contract, made a change of this depth to 10 foot 3 inch (without my knowledge) But I started the work, put on a large force of men, prosecuted the work in such a manner that silenced for a while my most malignant enemies—the extra work of course to be paid in addition to my contract price This they refused to do They gave me what they called bonds, that to me were valueless, on account of their being not negotiable, monied men asserting that they were not worth the paper they were written on, and at times the trash was kept from me longer than was necessary, in order, if possible, to cripple me, and as to the vaunted boast of the finance committee paying me more cash pro ratio than I was entitled to, the first payment, this they did to save themselves, as owing to their neglect of the duties entrusted to them, they did not have the bonds printed, and in consequence had to pay the cash The cash part was paid by giving me an order on an empty Treasury. Though I have made frequent applications, is returned the same answer, "No funds to meet it," and consequently this Titusville city cash order has dead and unhonored in my coat pocket, with some of the so called city bonds

And now for Spring street sewer This work, while in process of construction was interfered with in the following manner a party in city authority, under the impression, I suppose, that, as the sewer was started, whether completed or not, must necessarily drain the city whole or in part—cut off and filled in the old sewer on Perry south of Spring When the rain storm came on, the old sewer having no outlet, the water backed up into the Spring street sewer, in process of construction, causing the banks to cave and damaging me to the tune of over six hundred dollars, for this I supposed that they would not hesitate to pay, I consequently made out a bill and presented it to the Council, and as yet have not heard from it, though some five weeks have elapsed since the presentation of that bill The city lights seeing their mistake in filling in the south portion of Perry, were compelled to get men in the height of the storm to prevent further damage, and open it It is stated that I took the work under city parties Now I ask have the city any reason to complain of this when they are the gainers by the operation? But there is where the secret of the trouble lies

* * * * *

My contract with the city, had they carried out their part of in good faith, would have saved the tax payers many thousands of dollars As an instance of the manner that I have been assisted, I completed the Spring street sewer, and then demanded my back money, or percentage returned It would enable me to pay off my men They refused to pay me this amount This is a small sample of their kindness There are many more grievances I might advance, but do not deem it necessary here On one point I am determined on, and that is, that I will be made good for all damage resulting from the treatment I received I regret this matter very much, but the course is unavoidable on account of the way I have been used Respectfully,

RALPH GORE

Crawford County Medical Society.

From the Crawford Democrat

The Crawford County Medical Society met pursuant to adjournment, in Meadville, January 23, 1872, at one o'clock, p. m, and was called to order by the President, Dr. John C Cotton The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved The committee who were appointed to see that the Act of Assembly regulating medical practice was enforced, reported progress, and on motion of Dr Young, were continued. The committee to procure blanks for report of cases, made a verbal statement, and were continued The reports of Censors being called for, Dr Kerr, of Harrisburg, was ballotted for, and was duly elected to membership The reports of cases being in order, Dr Varian read a paper before the society, of great interest, where a quarter of a grain of morphine had been hypodermically injected, and the case would have terminated fatally had not artificial respiration been instituted, and continued until the blood in the pulmonary capillaries became arterial Belladonna was administered as an antagonism to the poison of morphine Some discussion ensued as to its physiological effect, the members, for the most part concurring in the opinion that the influence was through the cerebro spinal system Dr Ray reported the case of a lady carcotized with morphine, relieved by the fluid extract of Belladonna administered internally Dr. Barr stated a similar case which had been treated in the same manner by Dr Oakes Dr O Neill reported several cases, one of xeroma, in which the entire conjunction was affected, also a fracture of the distal extremity of the ulna, occurring in a lady over seventy years—fracture united without any deformity Dr Barr reported a case of scallet fever attended with paralysis of arm and foot—patient recovering Dr Hassle reported some cases of scarlet fever in his practise Dr Ray reported a case of a fibaous tumor weighing some twenty pounds, and exhibited the specimen and gave a history of its growth The doctor also reported a case of tape worm which he had succeeded in removing from a patient, and exhibited the specimen It was thirty feet in length. The treatment consisted of three capsules of male fern, at night, followed by two capsules next morning, and a dose of oil subsequently The treatment was successful. Dr Best reported a case of Hiemoplysis proceeding from the pulmonary gastro mucous membrane

The election of officers being next in order, the society proceeded to ballot with the following result President Dr Wm Varian, of Titusville, Vice President, Drs Ray and Oakes, Recording Secretary, Dr Chase, Corresponding Secretary, Dr Young, of Titusville, Treasurer, Dr Calvin, Censors, Drs. Barr, Cotton and O Neill, Delegates to the State Medical Society, Drs Young, O'Neill, Kerr, Delegates to the American Medical Association, Drs Cotton, Varian and Calvin

On motion, Drs Ray and Hassler were appointed a committee to conduct the President elect to the chair The retiring President then read a very interesting essay, which, on motion of Dr. Ray, was requested for publication Dr Crawford, of Venango county Medical Society, being present, was requested to address the meeting, which he did in his happy manner, considering the achievements in the past, he believed that we might look for still greater once in the future—the physician who does not keep up with the progress of his profession, sins against intellect and humanity The society requested him to carry its fraternal greetings to Venango county Medical Society

On motion, the society adjourned to convene in Titusville on the first Tuesday in April DR BEST, Rec Sec

HOSPITAL MEETING.—The ladies of the Home Relief request all those persons who are interested in the City Hospital to meet at the lecture room of the Presbyterian church, Monday evening January 8th at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of transacting the very important business of electing officers, ect, etc] Through the generosity of George K Anderson we have a commodious and comfortable building, and as we have also the necessary funds for furnishing at least the indispensables, we desire to complete our arrangement for immediate occupancy, there being almost daily demands for such service as we shall then be able to render the sick poor

It is therefore to be hoped that there will be a full attendance of both ladies and gentlemen this evening who are willing to co-operate in this good work of "Remembering the poor" in a practical manner

Playing Faro on Tick.

THE $10,000 THAT THE HON. JOHN MORRISSEY WON AND LOST.

One of the leading capitalists and real estate men of Cincinnati is Mr. John Kilgour, who is well known on the turf, and is said to be the backer or partner of Keene Richards, the great Kentucky horse-breeder and turfman. Now and then Mr. Kilgour seeks relaxation from the cares of business, and at such times his fancy is prone to lead him into a combat with the tiger.

On the 20th of February last Mr. Kilgour fought the tiger owned by the Hon. John Morrissey, at 54 West Twenty-fifth street. On the night in question Mr. Kilgour was in hard luck. His ventures were uniformly unfortunate, and before long he had disposed of all his ready money.

Then he began to play on credit. He was known personally to some of the employes of the house, and by reputation to others, and was accompanied by Count Bally Lewis of Cincinnati, who vouched for his ability to pay. First he played in $3,000 worth of chips, and demanded more. Mr. Mead, the Hon. John's managing man, objected to giving further credit, and cited the rule of the establishment; but Mr. Kilgour insisted on keeping up the play, and vaunted his ability to pay one hundred times the amount demanded. The debt was increased to $5,000, and Mr. Kilgour continued the play, losing steadily a bet*ter*. At last his reinforcement of chips had disappeared into the maw of the tiger, and again he demanded credit.

This time Mr. Mead's refusal was more firm and determined than before, but at length, what with the protestations of Mr. Kilgour and the assurances of Count Bally Lewis that his friend was both rich and honorable, his objections were overruled, and $5,000 more of the ivories were passed over to the infatuated gambler, still the luck continued bad, and stack after stack of the precious chips was taken in by the smiling dealer, until at last the Cincinnatian was "broke." At early dawn on the 21st of February he left the abode of the Hon. John's tiger, giving his word of honor that the $10,000 should be paid on demand.

Mr. Mead called on Mr. Kilgour at his hotel on the 21st, and gently reminded him of the little play transaction of the previous night, intimating that a draft or a check would be acceptable. Mr. Kilgour demurred. The play should not have been allowed, credit should have been refused, and so on. After an infinity of words he refused positively to settle the debt, and Mr. Mead retired.

From that time to this the debt has remained unpaid, the only evidence remaining in the hands of the Hon. John being certain memoranda of the Cincinnatian's great credit play. Mr. Morrissey has frequently threatened Mr. Kilgour with exposure through the public press, but has been persuaded by friends of the latter to forego his vengeance on the assurance that the debt would be paid.

At length forbearance ceased to be a virtue, and a day or two ago he retained Forrest and Lindeman of Cincinnati, and instructed them to commence suit against Mr. John Kilgour for $10,000 on account of value received.

Should Mr. Kilgour appear to defend the suit, his only plea will be the "Gambling Act," which of course will non-suit the plaintiff; but it is surmised that, rather than defend it and undergo the public scandal and disgrace, he will negotiate a compromise.

It is reported that this is not the first of Mr. Kilgour's "debts of honor" that have been protested. A Sun reporter was informed last night by a late resident of Cincinnati, (himself a sporting man) that Mr. Kilgour had been engaged in a somewhat similar transaction three years ago. The incident referred to occurred, he said, at the race-meeting in New Orleans. Mr. Kilgour and the famous Dick Cheatham, thon a member of the Tennessee Legislature, engaged, during this meeting, in sundry games of poker—whether draw or straight deponent sayeth not—and Dick Cheatham being a member of the Legislature (a position which is believed to give a man a vast deal of skill in this beautiful game), came out victor.

Mr. Kilgour lost about $3,000 (on credit); and to this day, according to the Cincinnatian referred to, the Hon. Dick has looked in vain for his money.

In the future no white horses are to be employed in the French army, they were found to be such excellent guides to the Prussians where to direct their fire.

During last week 851,643 gallons of petroleum were sent from Philadelphia to foreign ports, making a total of 54,545,104 gallons since the first of January, 1871.

Mrs. Partington mentions the case of a minister who had "served the Lord for thirty years, first as a circuit-rider, then as a locust preacher, and last as an exhauster."

Glasgow has about 100,000 or 120,000 nominal Protestants who never attend church. All the Presbyterians of that city are making vigorous efforts to evangelize them.

Captain Burton, the African traveller, has boned a collection of skulls from Palmyra, and will exhibit them in England. He also has the skeleton of a man eleven feet high.

Garibaldi's Autobiography, upon which he is now engaged, will not be published until after his decease—an instance of the modesty of authorship which is rare nowadays.

The Want, a new penny paper, has appeared in Pittsburgh. Just imagine the condition of the wretched Pittsburghers, with Want staring them in the face every day.

A man of Nebraska said he could handle a rattlesnake in the same way as a snake charmer. The cheerfulness of the undertaker in demanding pay in advance delayed the funeral four hours.

The Sultan of Turkey, who has lately begun some administrative reforms, has also turned his attention to railroads and the improvement of river communication throughout the empire.

Horace Greely writes: "Women now manage most of the public libraries in Massachusetts," and the compositor read it: "Women now worry most of their public babies by mastication.

An exchange says that the new style of collar for gentlemen is simply terrific. They are an economical article, however, as with moderately long pantaloons they do away with all necessity for a shirt.

The revised edition of the Bible in Chinese, which has for some time been preparing at Pekin, is now nearly ready, and will soon be issued from the American Mission press, within the walls of the capital.
